

Sinclair
Broadcasting's
airing of an anti-John Kerry
documentary directly
before the election
represents a clear
bias from a media
group that, as a
recipient of free
usage of public
airwaves, that should be serving
the public interest
with unbiased
programming.

The program that Sinclair
Broadcasting is pre-empting its normal scheudle
with, 'Stolen
Honor', represents
what is essentially
a free hour long
campaign add for George Bush.

The abuses Sinclair
is committing are diagnostic signs of the dangers to freedom of speech and democracy that come with the continued waxing of media conglomerates.

Media ownership
rules need to be more restrictive,
not less so, if we are to maintain
access to unbiased
news and information.
